

For far too long, the transit needs of the Hudson Valley have gone unanswered.

Our suburban transit system is facing unprecedented growth

3,000 more people took Metro North trains each day in 2015

84.7 million people rode Metro North in 2015, ranking it the second highest commuter railroad in the U.S.

But things are about to get moving again.

For the first time in history, transit decisions are coming to your county...

Move HV

Regional transit decisions in hands of elected officials

$700 million dedicated to suburban transit needs

4 New Metro North Bronx stations with service directly to Penn Station

Increased County bus service

Increased parking capacity at Metro North stations

Bus Rapid Transit on the Tappan Zee Bridge